A NOVEL OCCUPATION.

In the Woman's Home Companion for July a Boston girl tells of the novel method by which she and her sister are earning an education "We gather old fruit-baskets in the summer, clean and sort them during the winter months, and when, spring comes have them all ready for sale. Our sustomers are the small-fruit growers, most of them living near us. The maof them need comparatively small quantities, so that in buying new crates they do not get the benefit of the reduction made to larger dealers. As our second-hand baskets look almost, if not quite, as good as new, and as we sell them several cents lower on the hundred than they can get them lsewhere, we often have a greater demand than we can supply. Last year we cleared six hundred dollars, Atvided between us allows twenty-five dollars a month to each of us.

LEARN TO BE METHODICAL.

Every man or woman who has amounted to much has been distinguished early by a power to work hard. Genius alternates periods of frantic application with spells of idleness in which spent forces recover tone; but smoothly. Its rests are regular work more methodical. Without method it is lost, and I believe there is no more certain sign of superior ability in a child than an innate tendency to methodize his labors and the disposar of his time. In order to bring to fruition any germ of this healthy and beautiful aculty teach the little one from his earliest years to be regular in all his habits; not merely to have a place for his belongings, but special special duties. Encourage him to regulate his life in accordance with rules which he himself has chosen. Let him experiment and find out the defects of his system, that he may reform it con tinually, until he has arranged one that can stand.

A Good Reputation. "The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you desire to appear." That is precisely the manwhich Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has gained its reputation as a cure for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. Every bottle that has ever been put out by the manufacturers has been fully up to the high standard of excellence claimed ople have found that it can always depended upon for the relief and these allments and that it is pleasant and safe to take.
